In a get to know you time at the beginning of confirmation classes this Spring, the students, mentors, and I shared our favorite spot outdoors between – trees, mountains, and beaches. The favorites were evenly split among us.

Summer is a time when we often can enjoy all of these things. Some we get away from home to see and others are right nearby. Each causes us to celebrate the good creation God has given us.

Since the Garden of Eden the creation has experienced its “labor pains” as the apostle puts in Romans chapter 8, growing, sometimes under stress, into the good habitat God intended for us to enjoy. Sometimes we have done better than other times in caring for it but it still surrounds us and has been given for our sustenance, fulfillment, and stewardship.

There are no unsacred places; there are only sacred places and desecrated places. This from the Christian writer poet Wendell Berry who nudges Christians in this and other pieces to remember that the creation God made is holy. To care for it and remember that it is God's. I hope that you have some time this summer to get outside and stare. Stare at the wonder of God's beauty, see the wide expanse of God's good world, pray about how you can care for it and enjoy it.

Our Seeds for Needs Garden at Wesley is a shining example of caring for God's good creation, and seeing how God has provided it for our life together. I thank God that Wesley has this garden that donates tons of produce every year to those in need in our community. This is such a tangible way to care and to provide.

This summer, I invite you to consider two things – volunteer to serve in our Garden. You can call or email the church and we can put you in touch with Tony Lucenti who coordinates this ministry. Work in your garden at home or help someone with theirs.

Second, get outdoors as much as you can – feel the grass under your bare feet, look at the trees around us, maybe drive to Crystal Beach and look out into the ocean, if time allows, maybe some of you can see some mountains.

While doing these things give thanks to God, and be reminded that God cares for us, provides for us, and charges us with stewardship over His sacred creation.

See you Sunday,
Pastor Tommy
